

The FCC needs to leave the Indiana No call policy alone. Do not weaken the state's ability to eliminate the unsolicited and harassing phone calls that I no longer receive. It is utterly ridiculous to lower the standards of a law that is working so well. The no call list was the best thing the Indiana legislature has done to eliminate harassment in my own home. I do not want these phone calls and I should have the right to determine whether a company invades my home with their sales pitches. Stop bowing to big companies and start looking out for private citizens who just want peace and quiet.
